Recipe Corner: Sack Mead

Sack Mead

If you like your mead sweet, light, and true to their heritage, you'll love sack mead. The flavor is so full of honey, you can almost hear the bees buzz! Because this mead is flavored only with honey, the tannin is an essential part of the recipe. Leave it out and you may find the end result a bit insipid.

Yield: 1 Gallon

- 3 pounds of orange-blossom honey
- 1 teaspoon acid blend
- 1 teaspoon pectic enzyme
- 1 Campden tablet
- 1 package (5-7g) Montrachet yeast
- 1 teaspoon yeast nutrient
- 1 ½ cups orange juice at room temperature
- ¼ teaspoon grape tannin

1. In a large enamel or stainless steel pot, boil the honey in water (1 part honey to 2 parts water) for 10 to 20 minutes, skimming off any foam that forms. (The foam will contain water impurities and beeswax residue.)
2. Let cool, and then transfer the honey mixture to a 2-gallon plastic container. Add the acid, pectic enzyme, and enough water to make 1 gallon. Add the Campden tablet, if desired, and let mixture sit, well covered, for 24 hours.
3. In a jar, make a yeast starter culture by combining the yeast, yeast nutrient and orange juice. Cover, shade vigorously, and let stand 1 to 3 hours, until bubbly; then add to the must.

4. Add the tannin and allow the mixture to ferment. We recommend raking meads after the most vigorous fermentation: siphon the wine into a 1-gallon air-locked fermentation vessel, in about three months, rack into another air-locked container. In about six months, rack once again. Rack a final time right before bottling – about a year after fermentation started. Then bottle and cork the finished mead, and store it in a cool cellar.
5. Age for at least six months before opening a bottle.

Seneschal's Corner: Report on Highland War

Lady Jane de Sealynn

Highland War Wrap Up

366 attended of those there were 27 children and 14 teens. Below are the officer's reports about the War, as reported in the September Shire meeting.

Seneschal – Everyone I spoke to enjoyed themselves. We need to be better prepared for next year with lists of items needed. As soon as I get all reports I will put them together and create a master list for next year.

Arts & Sciences – Everything went well. We will need new sponsor for Iron chef and Brewing Competition next year. We need to keep questioning public back from competitors during cooking. Classes went off smoothly. Open Bardic — no information at this time.

“Aucune Merde, There I was” no one showed up.

Chatelaine – everyone pitched in to talk to Military visitors.

Constable – There was a problem with a guest from the Horseman camp who was a drunk driver. They handled it within their camp. The next two items were not reported until the meeting and the Constable did not know of them.
